With the recent enactment of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, state governments across the country are poised to make unprecedented expenditures of Federal aid to upgrade the nation's transportation and social infrastructure. But will these stimulus funds be adequate to meet the infrastructure needs of the U.S. in the 21st Century?

A diverse panel of industry participants will discuss, in a roundtable format, the prospects for private sector participation in the development and financing of our roads, railroads, transit systems and schools in light of the recent Federal stimulus bill.
